

Wayshowers Philosophysm

AWARE

FEBRUARY 2018

Over time it becomes more and more difficult to claim ignorance. My “first mistake” in this regard was, learning about the bigger picture of the Real Me . . . including that I am a soul, that I am here to learn & grow, and that I have a Thrust & Purpose. My “second mistake” was getting connected with my Spiritual Helpers, and teaming up with them to fulfill my plan. After that, I am Free. No one can keep me ignorant, uninformed, and in bondage. One simple reality — that I am energy and that planet earth is a giant school — transforms my life into one majestic opportunity.

There may be things I am still mastering, or even just beginning to learn, but to say I am actually unaware is becoming more and more difficult to say with a straight face. Just within one single situation in my day, I receive many times many messages & insights . . . all I need to do to be successful, is to be sensitive to what I already know.

I’m reminded that I’m right, for me; even when I’m wrong I’m right. Freedom is innate to the soul. No one has to teach me this. I know the difference between what is restrictive and what is free. There will always be things I can get caught in or feel in-prisoned by, as I am becoming more one-with-all. But as I realize the systems of planet earth are here for my benefit, I relax. I recognize the beauty of all that I have here.

I never ‘not know.’ I can litter myself with distractions or confusion but my sensitivity is always there. Even those who pass-on, stuck in a state of confusion, can still find themselves, and get home. When I feel sorry for someone I am creating an aura, or energy pattern, that says ‘you are lesser,’ ‘you are incapable,’ and ‘you have no power.’ Society’s shortsighted training is, sympathy is good. I can be tricked into forgetting how detrimental it is for me to treat an individual that way. This is where the real distinction of empathy versus sympathy comes in. If I want to stay at the level I am at, and continue in my progress, it is essential that I continue to free myself and free people. This is difficult when I get caught in either glory, devotion or competition. Acceptance & Respect, for myself and people, are key to keeping things clean and clear.

What do I use to cover up that which I know? How do I allow my senses to get dulled? When do I indulge in trivia rather than what ‘My Business’ is? Being truly aware is next level stuff. It requires that I am perceptive, honest, and fair with myself, open to changing the ways I relate to my own self and to other people. It requires maintenance . . . continual and constant maintenance, and periodic refreshing, too. That’s why I need to take time to regroup.

I pay a price when I let myself get riled up, or let someone rattle my cage. There is an inner assessment it’s prudent for me to make: “What am I getting out of it” and “What am I putting into it.” Every day I have my agenda, my project board, my daily routines. I have weekly and monthly routines. How do I measure my days? How do I measure my hours? There is a story of a chicken and a pig that highlights the difference between “a contribution” and “total commitment.” In short, I get out of life exactly what I put into it, and this applies to everything I do. I am Aware, I am shedding the bonds of ignorance. I am Aware, I am transitioning from separation into One-with-All. I am Aware, I have a Purpose. I am Aware.